This book gives you a nice feeling for what Glasgow must have been like back in the 1920s and '30s. Unfortunately, it reads like a first draft, and the sections where Dudgeon's not quoting people left me bewildered and frustrated by the obvious lack of editing.

Our Glasgow

Born out of riot, revolution and immigration, Glasgow, once the 'second city of the Empire', has also been labelled the most violent city in the world. From the shipyards of Govan to the locomotive works of Springburn, the hardness of life engendered a culture of heroic boozing, gang battles and sectarian warfare.
