They were shocked by the Japanese atrocities committed in and around the fallen city, though they responded swiftly to include the atrocities in their news coverage. The journalists were desperate to have their reports sent and published in a timely manner.

Lu, Suping 1955 | Encyclopedia.com

In his first book, They Were in Nanjing: The Nanjing Massacre Witnessed by American and British Nationals, Suping Lu uses newly uncovered eyewitness reports and material left behind by American and British journalists, missionaries, and diplomats to examine the notorious Nanjing Massacre. The Nanjing Massacre began following the Japanese capture of Nanjing in China in December 1937. The
